

PROGRAM DELIVERY METHODS

Program delivery methods accommodate students' needs

A one-size-fits-all approach to education isn't right for all learners. Students' needs are diverse, and they come to college from all walks of life and at all stages of their lives. And as such, they need their education to work for them. WCTC offers College programs in delivery formats to meet students' individual educational needs.

Traditional

Programs offered in the traditional format feature face-to-face in-classroom instruction during the day, at night or on weekends.

Flexible Options

Online learning options are also available, and courses are generally scheduled during typical 8-week semesters. In addition, many courses will be delivered in a hybrid format. This combines in-class instruction with online learning. These courses are designed for students who desire flexibility to fit with their work and family schedules.
